Weekly
Roundup

WR 13-88

March 30, 1988

The Foreign Agricultural Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture today reported the following developments in world agriculture and trade.

GRAIN AND FEED

THAILAND'S Exportable Corn Supplies Still in Question. Thailand's exportable corn supplies for 1987/88, currently expected to be 850,000 tons, are still uncertain given the drought-reduced 1987/88 corn crop and the sluggish rate of shipments for the first six months of the international marketing year. Thailand normally ships about two-thirds of its exportable supplies in that period, but only about 300,000 tons have been shipped. A possible explanation for the lagging pace is that unusually large quantities of corn are being held off the market in anticipation of higher domestic prices. Release of these privately held stocks, in conjunction with the availability of new crop Thai corn in July, and thus lower prices, could lead to extraordinarily heavy shipments in the July-through-September quarter.

OILSEEDS AND PRODUCTS

JAPANESE Reduce Peanut Quota Again. On March 15 Japan announced its peanut import quotas for the second half of the Japanese fiscal year (April/March), according to the U.S. agricultural counselor in Tokyo. Overall, the peanut quota for 1987 was reduced to 54,000 tons from 54,300 tons in 1986 and 57,000 tons in 1985. Although the overall quota for the year is lower, the quota for the second half of the year is higher than last year's quota for the second half--26,600 tons compared to 23,400 tons in 1986 and 25,900 tons in 1985.

INDIA Lifts Duty Exemptions and Encourages Area Expansion for Oilseeds. India has removed its customs duty exemptions for oilseeds. The scheduled rate of 105 percent is currently being applied, resulting in no oilseed imports. This decision was surprising in light of the short oilseed crop and the expected 30-percent jump in vegetable oil imports. Moreover, palm kernels were added to the list of duty-exempted oilseeds last December, raising expectations that oilseed imports would be encouraged this year. India is the largest importer of vegetable and marine oils; 1987/88 imports are a forecast 1.990 million tons or about 12 percent of world imports.

In a related item, the Indian government is encouraging farmers to plant oilseeds instead of wheat in traditional irrigated wheat areas with limited irrigation facilities. The government argues that: the rabi (spring) harvested oilseed crop requires less water than wheat; oilseeds are more profitable than wheat sown after mid-December; and domestic oilseed demand is far greater than supply.

DAIRY, LIVESTOCK AND POULTRY

TAIWAN'S Farmers Protest Imports of U.S. Poultry. Protests continue in Taiwan over the recent upsurge in U.S. turkey exports to Taiwan. The United States exported 770 tons of turkey to Taiwan in the first two months of 1988, well above last year's levels. Taiwan's farmers claim that turkey imports from the United States have seriously depressed poultry prices in Taiwan. Recently, Taiwan agreed to begin reissuing turkey import licenses starting in May, following trade negotiations with U.S. government officials. Taiwan had banned turkey imports from the United States in February in an effort to protect its domestic poultry industry.

JAPANESE Importers Suspend Purchases of Pork From Taiwan. Japanese importers reportedly have stopped purchasing pork products from Taiwan following the discovery of sulfanilamide residues in 4.4 tons of pork imported from Taiwan on March 14. Japan's Ministry of Health and Welfare will begin inspecting all pork imports from Taiwan for sulfa residues. Previously, only 10 percent of Taiwan's pork exports to Japan were tested. It is not believed, however, that this problem will remain unresolved long enough to cause lasting trade effects which might significantly benefit U.S. pork exporters.

Pork was Taiwan's most important agricultural export in 1987, with exports of nearly 137,000 tons, most of which was shipped to Japan. Taiwan is the largest supplier of pork to Japan, and is an important competitor for U.S. pork exports in the Japanese market.

FRUITS

MEXICAN Strawberry Production Continues To Expand. Mexico's 1987/88 strawberry harvest is forecast to reach a record 120,000 tons, 32 percent greater than the bumper crop a year ago. Generally favorable weather prevailed throughout the growing season despite scattered frosts during late January and early February. Surprisingly, the frosts proved beneficial by thinning the bloom and delaying the peak harvesting period thus preventing excessive price reductions due to seasonal oversupplies.

The main reason for this season's projected record output is a 26-percent increase in area made possible by a joint decision of the Mexican government and the National Association of Horticultural Producers that permitted the planting of additional land. An additional factor was the considerable increase in plantings outside the authorized quota--mainly by growers in the largest producing region, Michoacan. Average yields for the 1987/88 season are expected to increase to 20 tons per hectare--5 percent greater than last year. Crop quality appears good with approximately 34 percent of the fruit graded "A", 51 percent "B" and 15 percent grade "C".

Production of frozen strawberries is currently estimated at a record 55,385 tons, 39 percent greater than the 1986/87 pack, due to the sizable harvest and low frozen inventories. For the second consecutive year, the percentage of strawberries diverted for processing exceeds the volume destined for the domestic fresh market. A producer cooperative processing plant is now operating at partial capacity. This is enabling low income producers to withhold supplies from the private processing plants, freeze them in the cooperative plant and await better prices in the frozen product market.

The following table presents Mexico's fresh and frozen strawberry production.

	1985/86	1986/87	1987/88 1/
Area harvested (hectares)	4,000	4,750	6,000
Production, fresh (tons)	68,000	90,900	120,000
Production, frozen (tons)	28,052	39,753	55,385

WEEKLY EXCHANGE RATE DEVELOPMENTS

On March 24, the dollar fell to its lowest level against the yen since early January. Concern over increased U.S. consumer spending raised fears about inflation and the U.S. trade deficit, prompting the world's major central banks to intervene to support the U.S. currency.
